Greater forces are at work, though, as an accidental link is formed between Candra and Ben, "marking" their souls and coupling them forever. They can now see each other's thoughts and speak to one another telepathically—bad news for sworn enemies. Occults spreading across Hartford, along with Candra and Ben's mishap, are part of a bigger plan, one that neither the Lowells nor the Conways ever saw coming. There is more than one Ancient in their midst, and these primordial beings are lying in wait until Candra inherits her power. A power which hasn't been seen in over five hundred years. A power which balances one of her enemy's. These two powers combined can change the course of history. In order to survive a battle with the Ancients and protect their abilities, the Lowell's and Conway's will have to work together. Can they rise above their feud, or will they lose everything?

Deprogramming Black America is an ever-evolving and dynamic foundation to both establish and re-establish a core set of guide lines dedicated to creating, restoring, and officially documenting a pride in being of an African in America. (African First – then American). It is not my intent to impose a set way of thinking but to offer a suggested primary set of standards and recommendations that will assist people of African with the new quest for pride. This book is long overdue, yet right on time. I believe that the past, present and the future all exist on some plain at the same time, and that the words and energy of the many great men and women that inspired this book will forever be a light and a tribute to the Africans and people of African descent that both walked before us and continue to walk with us, as we form this discipline of the mind needed to deprogram this generation of Black America.
