What would Buddha say about health care ethics, social obligations, or feminism? 'A Buddhist Kaleidoscope' is a collection of essays by international scholars of Buddhism who provide historic and modern reflections on the greatest teachings of Buddha from the Lotus Sutra. Editor Gene Reeves includes a broad range of views - one essay considers the Lotus Sutra in relation to social obligations, while others apply feminist and paternalist readings to the text. The result is an in-depth exploration of the meaning of the sutra with broad implications for the modern world. Using an integrated approach, this text focuses on the process of writing, critical reading techniques, and the use of Standard English grammar in formal writing. Each of the ten chapters contains challenging and thought-provoking readings (both professional and student) and instruction and applications in writing and related grammar. The scope of the text ranges from defining sentences and paragraphs to drafting and organizing a whole essay. Assignments require students to use reading, writing, and grammar knowledge and to use newspapers, dictionaries, library resources, and other commonly ignored resources — so that they become lifelong learners, rather than simply learning a few isolated skills.
